

As I was talking to Ps. Ronnie about this week's message, the song 'So will I' came to me almost immediately as a reminder that God is our wonderful creator and that Jesus was present at the beginning and will continue to be to the end of time. Listen carefully, through speakers if possible, to the drums in the last part of the song. I like to imagine it as representing the heartbeat of our Lord and I take comfort that it will continually beat throughout all humanity and time – including in these current, troubled times.

The other songs include some of my all-time favourites which remind me of the redeeming power of our Lord and reminding us of the beauty often found in the seemingly tragic times of our lives. He can use everything for our good and I encourage you all to seek His goodness in this time of uncertainty and fear. I love that families are spending time together, creating together, praying together; even strangers seem kinder and gentler toward each other and we have so many opportunities to comfort those who are seeking. Simply sharing a smile, being kinder to shop assistants, helping a neighbour or praying for all of the above. I feel the earth is taking one, long, deep breath and some greater good will come from the pause we are taking.

Finally, I felt moved to include a couple of hymns as a reflection of how faithful He is. Again, to remind us to breathe and know that He has got this under control. As Ronnie often says, we need to let go of our fears and control and allow God to do His thing.

May God bless you all abundantly during this forced separation and I pray that you are all continuing to connect with each other during this time. Please gather your loved ones, take some rest in Him as you enjoy this time of worship giving thanks and praise to our Blessed saviour Jesus Christ.

Hallelujah!
Blessings, Anne
